CONTRACT LET FOR ERECTION OF NEW DALY CITY THEATRE

The contract has been let for the building of the new motion picture theatre to be located at the corner of Mission and Flournoy streets, Daly City, the firm of Anderson & Ringrose having secured the contract for this important undertaking.

Work of excavating for the new building began last Wednesday. The contractors have promised to push the work on the new structure to completion as rapidly as consistent with good workmanship.

The new building will be of the combination theatre and store room type, the front entrance of the stores being on Mission street. The cost of the structure will be in the neighborhood of $150,000.

The plans call for a theatre which will be a beautiful and substantial amusement home, the equal of any theatre on the peninsula and one that will compare favorable with the down town movie houses. It will have a seating capacity of 1,200, and will be arranged in such a manner that every patron may be made comfortable and be in a position to enjoy the high class entertainment that will be provided for the people of Daly City and vicinity.

Creston H. Jensen, the architect in charge, has an enviable reputation in his line of work, and has drawn upon his years of experience in planning a theatre which will be a monument to his ability as an architect.

High class pictures and vaudeville is promised by Baron & Nathan, who have secured a long time lease on the new theatre. These gentlemen are well konwn in the amusement world. They are familiar with the proper conducting of successful amusement enterprises and believe the people of Daly City will generously patronize high class attractions, presented in the proper setting, such as they will have when the new theatre is completed.

The project of securing a theatre for Daly City was undertaken some time ago by a committee of progressive citizens, including A. L. Stockton, city treasurer, R. C. MacArthur, manager of the Bank of Italy, Daly City Branch, Mayor H. H. Smith, City Attorney J. E. McCurdy and H. F. Fellows, and it was through their efforts that the project has been successfully launched.

DALY CITY VETERAN FIREMEN HOLD THEIR ANNUAL BANQUET

The Veteran Firemen's Association of Daly City celebrated their second successful year with the annual banquet, which was held in the Eagles Hall on the evening of February 11. At the door of the banquet hall the invitations were taken up by the Marshal, and each member and invited guest received a badge and ring. About eighty men were seated at long tables, which were nicely decorated with heather and flowers.

After a flashlight picture had been taken, the banquet was formally started by President Larry Shaw, who selected Director Arthur Bodien to act as toastmaster for the evening A toast was given by Director J. J. Kennedy and all drank to the health of the association.

The toastmaster next presented Junior Past President A. J. Green with a very elaborate engraved gold badge with these words: "In behalf of the membership of the association I present to you this badge as a sign of our high esteem and continued good comradeship, and as a token of appreciation of your good work and sincerity, which you have shown throughout the term of your presidency. We sincerely hope that your guiding influence be felt for many years to come."

After the banquet some magic tricks were shown by Fireman W. H. Spreckelmeyer of Company No. 5, and Comrade J. Twesten, whose trick turned out to be a peach.

All left in good spirits and ready to start on another successful year for the association.

KEEP GOOD GOVERNMENT ON THE JOB

It is the policy of the Record to consistently boost for the best interests of Daly City, to promote the cause of everything which seems good for the whole community.

Good government ranks first in importance among community assets, and when attained should be kept in force through hearty co-operation and the approval of the electors from time to time as the occasion arises.

Daly City has at this time an efficient and harmonious administration of its city government, and the April election will give the voters an opportunity to indorse their good work when two of the five members of the board, the treasurer and the city clerk will come before the people for re-election. Possibly a clearer record of guardianship and achievement has rarely come before the citizenry of any community for adjudgment, as much of lasting good has been accomplished during the incumbency of our present officials.

In the completion of the street work and the additions and extensions in the water system during the past few years thousands of dollars have been well and wisely spent in the community good. Thousands of new citizens have come to Daly City during the past few years, and the boundaries have been extended to bring in many more and much valuable territory, thus bringing added responsibility and necessitating the enlargement of the police force and putting in of additional water services and mains.

A rare aptitude for keeping pace with the growing job has been apparent in the work of our city officials, and plans are being made all along the line for improvements and betterments.

To each in his place and for conscientious work the Record extends its hearty indorsement.

Trustee Henry Sundermann, chairman of the all important finance committee and of the library committee, has during his years on the board displayed a keen and honest purposefulness for working out even the finest details of every problem as it comes up for consideration, and has a record of just and careful attention to his duties.

Trustee Arthur J. Bodien is chairman of the park and playgrounds committee, the publicity committee and the ordinance committee. Mr. Bodien is a man of vision and high ideals with decided constructive tendencies, and has shown good judgment and foresight in general city planning. Under his direction a section of the park has been filled in and prepared for play purposes, except for the installation of apparatus, etc., and this work will go forward with the coming of fair weather conditions.

Treasurer A. L. Stockton in the guardianship of the funds entrusted to his care has proved himself always an honest and efficient public servant, and one whose sincerity of purpose is a part of the man.

City Clerk B. C. Ross has mastered the many details of his office and executes his duties ably and efficiently. Mr. Ross enjoys the confidence of the entire board and his constituency, having proved himself to be the man for the job.

These men come before the electors in April for a vote of confidence with a clear record of honest and efficient administration of the duties of their several offices, and are urged for re-election, to keep good government on the job.

EDUCATOR TO TALK TO CHURCH MEMBERS

On Sunday, February 19, Grace Presbyterian church will have a special treat in having for its speaker Professor Ferguson, principal of the Jefferson Union high school.

We are sure that Professor Ferguson has the community's welfare at heart and will bring us a message which well help to cement the homes and the schools closer together and will outline the work so that all may work in unity and in peace.

We bespeak for the occasion a real full house, so that we may not only grow better acquainted with our teacher, but may more fully see that the work of the school and the church are the same in the great field of education. Special music is promised.

Professor Ferguson will speak from the theme "What Young People Owe to Themselves," and desires to make it a real meeting for young people, and we feel sure that he will make it well worth while for all to come out and hear him.

Our C. E. President, Miss Sybil Riddell, will have charge of the evening program.

Don't forget the annual get-together meeting and dinner at Grace church on March 1, at 6:30, for a rare good fellowship is assured.

CHAS. H. GATCHELL, Minister.

ENROLLMENT STILL OPEN AT JEFFERSON HIGH NIGHT SCHOOL

Night school enrollment is still open at the Jefferson Union high school, according to an announcement by Principal James Ferguson. Courses are now being offered every Tuesday and Thursday evening from 7 to 9 o'clock in the following subjects: Americanization, bookkeeping and typing, auto mechanics, and orchestra.

Night schools all over the country are growing to fit the needs of adults who wish to continue their education and improve their positions. Any course that is demanded by a sufficient number of people will be provided, since the one aim of the night school is to serve the citizens.

At present, all the classes offered at the high school are well attended, but since the rooms are not yet filled, there is a splendid opportunity for learning the above subjects.

INTERESTING SESSION OF THE CITY COUNCIL

The City Council met Monday evening, with all members present, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

A request from the fire commissioners asking for material to improve Company No. 5 fire house was granted.

A protest from Mr. Edwards of the Edwards Drug Company, on Mission street, concerning the stopping of the Guerrero street cars, was read and filed, as this matter has been settled satisfactorily in the last week.

A committee from the board was asked to take part in the ground breaking of the new San Mateo and Hayward bridge, as this will be of great benefit in the near future to Daly City. Mayor Smith appointed Councilmen Bodien and Sundermann to take care of this matter.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company asked permission to lay a 16-inch high pressure gas main along several streets, and as this would mean the cutting of the pavement along our newly improved streets, the matter was referred to the city engineer to re-route.

A request from the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, asking to open Wellington avenue for cable extension was returned for blue print and further information.

A new and improved fire alarm chart, with several instructions, will be delivered to each house by the water department.

The lighting committee ordered a light on Woodrow street between Westlake and Citrus avenues.

A communication from the North Fork Highway Association, asking the indorsement of an all year highway to the state of Nevada, was referred to the city attorney.

The matter of permission to erect a store at the corner of Oliver and Hanover streets was described as being only a half block from a store, and only one block from the main business section. This has been given much thought and investigation by the Council, who have stated their intentions of enforcing the zoning law strictly in the future.

The street committee reported their intentions of removing certain trees on Wellington avenue, after permission has been obtained.

GRANTS PERMISSION TO BRIDGE SLOUGH

Application to build a permanent bridge across a slough opposite the Leslie Salt Works and near the Western terminal of the seven-mile span to be built across the bay has been granted the San Francisco Bay Toll Bridge Company by the war department in Washington. The bridge will be a unit in the three-mile approach to the San Mateo county approach to the bay span. It will be approximately 100 feet long and 200 feet wide, or the width of the roadway. The slough to the bridge is commonly known as Seal Creek. The structure will cost approximately $12,000.

SAN MATEO COUNTY HAS 15,999 AUTOS REGISTERED

There are nearly two million automobiles in the state of California, according to registration records that have been released from Sacramento. To be exact, there are 1,736,765 fee-paid motor vehicles, a gain of 95,214 over 1926. As the result of this registration, $7,550,906 in registration fees is to be apportioned to the highway commission for use in various counties as per the registration.

The San Mateo county apportionment is $41,014, based on a registration of 15,999 automobiles, 599 solid tire trucks, 2,034 pneumatic air trucks, 122 motorcycles and 209 trailers.

ARTERIAL STOP SIGNS ORDERED BY BOARD AT MONDAY SESSION

Stop signs will be erected along El Camino Real throughout San Mateo county at intersections designated in a chart prepared by Captain James Logan of the county traffic squad, but no ordinance will be passed making it unlawful to fali to observe the stop signals. This was the final decision of the county supervisors, meeting at Redwood City last Monday, after District Attorney Swart had advised against passage of the ordinance. The ordinance was considered by the board when officials of the California State Automobile Association, who had been asked to supply the signs, declined to do so until the county had designated the arterial stops by ordinance.

The supervisors said the request would again be made to the automobile association and that the signs will be erected by the county in case the association again refuses. The district attorney advised against passage of the ordinance, saying it would serve to protect the motorist from a distance at the expense of county residents living along the roads intersecting with the main highway.

Through traffic, perhaps speeding at 40 or 50 miles per hour, would lay the burden of proof on the motorist coming into the highway in case of accident, the board was advised.

Dr. A. L. Offield, Burlingame physician, was named superintendent of the San Mateo County Community hospital at Beresford, to succeed Mrs. Bertha Budworth, who handed her resignation to the board February 6.

The board voted reappointment of L. A. Barrett, of Beresford, as commissioner of the Pulgas mosquito abatement district.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT THE M. E. CHURCH

Sunday morning the church service at the Daly City Methodist church will begin at 10:45 instead of 11 o'clock. We are to have a special service for both the children and adults. It will begin at 10:45 and close at 11:20. Everybody will be interested in it. Jack Sanderson will play a special violin solo, accompanied by Mrs. Secour.

Sunday evening the pastor calls your attention to this outstanding service. The subject will be of intrest to all, "The Christ of the Indian Road." Mrs. Clarice Olson will sing two special numbers and Prof. T. Eugene Goudey will play for the entire service.

Wednesday evening at 6:30 the entire community is invited to help us celebrate Washington's birthday. Dinner will be served, followed by a delightful program. We will have the privilege of listening to Professor Savage, district superintendent of schools, and Mr. James Ferguson, principal of the Jefferson Union high school. Please save the date.

The Epworth League play, which will be given some time in April, is now under way. It is under the direction of Mrs. Harry McKee and Mr. Lewis Hunter.

The Sunday school board met last Wednesday evening at the pastor's study and made plans for the Easter program. We are looking forward to a great Easter service and especially to the Palm Sunday decision day service.

The Sunday school has been growing rapidly and we hope it continues to do so.

ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Pastor.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO BUYS GARBAGE SITE

Option on 7.89 acres of land near Belle Air island in the salt marsh east of the Bay Shore highway has been secured by the South San Francisco city council for use as a municipal garbage dump. The action of the council followed the request of the present garbage site to have the dump removed. It is understood the city secures land that is assessed at $800 an acre for $600 an acre.

SURVEYS BEING MADE ON NEW COAST ROAD

Motorists who wish to enjoy the scenic beauties and beach bathing of San Mateo county will be privileged to do so in the near future without the necessity of driving over San Pedro mountain, it was reported to a meeting of the Coastside Civic Union at Half Moon Bay last Monday night by George E. Dunn, Half Moon Bay publisher, speaking on progress in the proposed new coastside highway which is to follow the right-of-way of the former Ocean Shore railway and to be built by a joint district of San Mateo, San Francisco and Santa Cruz counties. Dunn reported on surveys being made around the mountain under the direction of County Engineer George A. Kneese, and advised the gathering that financing of this part of the work is to be the subject of a special meeting of highway directors with a view to completing it before other portions of the road.

FEAR OF THE TELEPHONE FOILS BANK ROBBERY

That burglars fear telephone operators almost as much as they do the police was illustrated once again the other night at South Bend, Ind., when an alert operator at the central exchange, around 2 o'clock in the morning, overheard this conversation: "We better get out of here. I just knocked the telephone off the table."

The police were notified at once. They went to the United States Lumber and Supply Company office where they found that the burglars had succeeded in opening the safe, but hadn't had time to rifle its contents, the upset telephone instrument having speeded their departure.

THE BANKER-FARMER MOVEMENT GROWING

There are several reasons for the growth of the banker-farmer movement in Pennsylvania, William S. McKay, Chairman of the Agricultural Committee, Pennsylvania Bankers Association, has reported to the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association. The cooperation and leadership of the county agents in the several counties of the state; the appointment and functioning of county chairmen of agriculture known as Key Bankers, one of whom there is in each county of the state; and the organization of county bankers associations, whereby agriculture is given consideration by all the banks, are responsible for this interest. The following table shows the activities for the year:

Project	Number of Counties
Sent young farmers to state college for special course	5
Encouraged farm shows.....	16
Held agricultural tours	6
Sponsored various club activities	38
Gave illustrated lectures on poultry, cow testing, and improved farm methods	1
Distributed purebred livestock, chicks, and disease-free potatoes	13

"There is probably no class of business men that has a greater opportunity for helpfulness than the bankers in this movement," declares Mr. McKay. "It builds up a substantial community which makes for better banking institutions; it adds to the material prosperity of our state, but above all, it is the expression of a service which will react favorably upon the character of those interested."

BANKERS HELP OUT

The Oklahoma Bankers Association for the past twelve years has financed through its five groups ten scholarships in the A. & M. College at Stillwater. The winners are chosen by the Extension Department of the college on the merits of the club work done by the boys and girls over a certain period of time. The groups of the association finance the first year of the winner's college work.

The president of a national bank in Fayettesville, Arkansas, has been credited with doing more for the farmers of his section than any other one man. His work has consisted of introducing pure bred Holstein cattle into his county, helping employ a county agent, donating prizes to boys and girls in club work, and distributing better seed.

Here are some of the things accomplished in Randolph County, Ark., with the help of bankers last year: forty-three purebred gilts were bought at a reasonable price and placed with boys and girls, on notes; three thousand eggs from high producing hens were distributed with the idea of developing flocks of at least one hundred hens on every farm; four purebred Jersey bulls whose dams had a record of over 700 pounds butterfat, have been purchased by the banks and will be paid for out of service fees.

An economist declares that the copper industry is on a sound basis. Brass appears to be producing its usual dividends also.

New York City has more than eight times as many telephones as the entire continent of Africa.

About 3,750,000 telephone calls are made each twenty-four hours in the state of Ohio.

Pond Recalls Many Memories of Thoreau

For some two years and three months Thoreau lived beside Walden pond, and "Walden" is probably the best known and most characteristic of his works. At the time the era of snobbery in nomenclature began in Massachusetts and turned so many good old ponds into "lakes," Walden pond was duly made "Lake" Walden. It is about a mile south of Concord and must look as Thoreau used to see it, the New York Times tells us.

The scenery of Walden is on a humble scale, and, although very beautiful, does not approach to grandeur, nor can it much concern one who has not long frequented it or lived by its shore; yet this pond is so remarkable for its depth and purity as to merit a particular description. It is a clear and deep green well, half a mile long and a mile and three-quarters in circumference, and contains about 61½ acres; a perennial spring in the midst of pine and oak woods, without any visible inlet or outlet except by the clouds and evaporation. The surrounding hills rise abruptly from the water to the height of 40 to 80 feet, though on the southeast and east they attain to about 150 feet respectively within a quarter and a third of a mile. They are exclusively woodland.

Bees Proved to Have Keen Sense of Color

Flowers attract insects by both color and odor, while form, and such markings as stripes or dots, also help to guide the visitors, in the opinion of investigators for the Carnegie institute, who have conducted a series of tests at the Pike's Peak laboratory for nine years. They discovered that blue is the most popular color among bees and other insects, red the least. Even when blue flowers were turned upside down, the bees eagerly sought them. Many bumble bees were baffled by the new position and found difficulty in mastering the problem of sipping nectar from the inverted blossoms. Bees showed evidence of the best memory, recalling places, odors, shapes and colors and knowing the time of day when the nectar flows. They never touched orange lotus blossoms, seeming to realize that the nectar stopped flowing after the flower had changed from yellow to orange. Fragrance attracted insects of various kinds from a distance, but color only within a radius of about thirty feet.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Judicial Sarcasm

One of the best bits of judicial sarcasm on record was presented by the late Judge K. M. Wanamaker of the Ohio Supreme court, who differed with his colleagues in a revolver case. He declared that if it is a crime for residents to have weapons in their homes, then a large percentage of the people of the state are criminals.

"The only safe course for them to pursue," he said, "is to hang the revolver on the wall and put below it a large placard with these words inscribed:

"'The Ohio Supreme court having decided that it is a crime to carry a concealed weapon on one's person, in one's home, even in one's bed or bunk, this weapon is hung upon the wall that you may see it, and before you commit any burglary or assault, please, Mr. Burglar, hand me my gun."

Sincerity Is Invaluable

Sincerity is the foundation. Without this rare but basic element, all that follows will be insecure. Emerson once said, "What you are speaks so loud, I cannot hear what you say." One of the prophets said, "The show of their countenance maketh them known." A man's real self rings out in his voice, peers out through his eyes, and stamps itself upon his face, bearing, attitude and all that he does and says. Value sincerity. You may not conform to the ideas of others, but whatever set principles you select as your invisible code, be true to them, believe in them and exemplify them.—Psychology Magazine.

Work With Hands and Feet

Craftsmen who fashion trinkets with their hands and feet still thrive in and around the Great Bazar, a little, tomblike city of its own on one of the seven hills of Stamboul, Turkey. Copper and iron smiths hammer out their wares in small recesses along the miles of arcades in the great, irregular stone building that is dark, smelly and dusty with the dust of centuries. Woodworkers in booths around this building use a bare foot and one hand to hold their cutting chisel in turning objects on small lathes.

Anxious Seat

"Old Lem Sawyer is in a heck of a fix."

"How so?"

"Well, he managed to marry a widder lady, and has just found out that her first husband was a gent he had helped to lynch about two months ago. He ain't discovered yet whether she don't know it or just natcherly married him out of revenge. But, either way, he is expecting something to happen any minute."—Los Angeles Times.

Good in Introspection

This world would be a paradise if every man were as good as he expects his neighbor to be. The trouble is we see the faults of others quicker than we see our own. Introspection is more profitable than inspection.—Grit.

GAS A CIVILZER

"Gas," says a news item, "is used in more than 5,000 different ways in industrial plants. About 25 per cent of the total amount of manufactured gas sold is now used by industries.

"About 48,000,000 persons in the United States now use gas, and new customers are being added at the rate of 350,0000 a year. The manufacture of gas utilizes more than 10,000,000 tons of coal and 9,000,000,000 gallons of oil each year. There are 966 gas utilities in operation.

The importance of gas as a civilizing element is enormous. It was not so very long ago that candles and kerosene lamps were the first and last ways in illumination, and gas was unknown. Then, in 1792, the possibilities of gas were discovered and the industrial history of the world changed.

We of this age, with our great utilities selling gas in any quantity at a reasonable price, can not imagine the hardships which would ensue if our gas supply were suddenly cut off. It has become necessary to home life and industry. Beyond a doubt we must grant it an important part in the building up of our civilization.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grand-children, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrnea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

"Well," she said with a long, deep sigh, "me I ain't got nothin' to be proud of—but my kar'kter!"

"Your—what?"

"My maur'l kar'kter."

"You mean your character?"

"Uh—huh. It's all I got."

"You've got something else—" He reached for her hand, drew off her cotton glove and clasped her fingers. "You've got—"

But she worked her hand free of his and drew on her glove again. "My fingers is cold."

He frowned. She might be glad he wanted to hold her hand!

"You not only have my mother, but your father, on the scent!" he reproached her. "What did you do to make him suspicious?"

"It was that there futch—Aunt Rosy tol' him about it. Did he—was he to see you?" faltered the girl—and the suspense in her voice was not assumed.

"No, but I had this letter from him." He drew an envelope from his pocket and handed it to her. "Read it—and see what mischief your fudge has made all 'round, my dear!"

It was a pathetic little note, Meely felt—poor Mr. Schwenckton anxiously endeavoring to protect his wayward child, yet equally anxious to avert dissension with his powerful neighbor by casting on him any base, unfounded suspicion; pointing out to St. Croix the impossibility of any safe or honorable relation between him and his daughter, due to their unsurmountable differences in station, wealth and education. Somehow, the most pathetic part of it to Meely was the poor man's struggles to write intelligent English. "Whiles we have always been in comfortable circumstances, yet limited, but honest and honorable."—"Our females in our family being ever Virtuous and very Chaste and never disgraced us, though many temptations."

Meely remembered, as she found the words all spelled correctly, how assiduously the farmer had, one evening, to her mystification, been consulting the dictionary and how he had asked her to spell for him several long words.

She was relieved to find that Nettie was referred to only as "My daughter," and not by name.

"Poor Pop!" she sighed as she returned the letter to its envelope and passed it back to St. Croix, "he means so well by us children!"

"So you see, Meely, you've got to be careful. No more fudge!"

"I never conceited it would give all this here trouble!" she lamented, on the verge of tears.

St. Croix looked a shade less austere. "Where'd you get the spiffy coat?" he asked. "Looks for the world like English tweed."

"It's the teacher's. She left me borrow the loan of it off of her."

"Now, look here! Why can't you say simply that she lent it to you?—instead of all those superfluous words—she let you borrow the loan of it off of her! Ye gods! 'She lent it to me.' That says what you mean, doesn't it? Five words instead of a dozen!"

"Aen, well!" pouted Meely, looking again as though she were on the verge of tears—and then suddenly, to her consternation, she quite uncontrollably snickered—crushing her hand against her mouth to keep from laughing hysterically. Fortunately for her, he took it for a suppressed sob.

"There, there, my dear!" he said half impatiently, half remorsefully. "Never mind! You're past teaching anyhow! Look here, Meely, why haven't you ever mentioned that the teacher boards with you? You've talked of everyone else in the household."

"Well, you see, I had afraid you might want to be gave an interduction to her and she's so pretty, I had jealous."

"She is a pretty little thing. But I wonder," he grinned, "what my brother, Marvin, thinks of such a little ignoramus teaching a district school! I didn't know they had such crude teachers as that in the schools!"

"But she's awful good in geography! She can bind every state on the patch-work quilt!"

"'Quilt'!"

"You know—the map. And sums! You had ought to see her do sums once! My—goodness! To be sure, she can't talk wery correct. She gets her w's and we's mixed terrible! But United States history! Why, she knows even the footnotes, now mind I'm tellin' you!"

While she talked, he watched her with shining eyes, but it was her ravishing self, not Nettie's proficiency in sums and footnotes, that caused the shining.

"I declare, Meely, in that coat you could pass for anything at all! You look positively like a swell! Patrician, actually!" He laughed, little dreaming, of course, that the girl understood why he laughed; why he thought it funny that Meely Schwenckton should look "patrician, actually!"

"And if I really was so pa—high-toned like I look in this here coat," she responded wistfully, "you could marry me then! Ain't, Mr. Creighton?"

"Marriage isn't the happiest relation between a man and woman, Meely—there is a freer, happier relation," he said insinuatingly—ingratiatingly.

"But since I ain't high-toned," she broke in, "why do you take all this here worry and trouble to meet up with me?"

"You're always asking me that, Meely! I've told you—you know—"

"No, I don't. If you think I'm common—too common to marry—then what is it about me you like so good?"

"Well, if you've got to have an answer, I suppose, Meely," he said, regarding her appraisingly, "it's that you're so absolutely feminine!"

"Well," She Said with a Long, Deep Sigh, "Me, I Ain't Got Nothin' to Be Proud of—but My Kar'kter!"

"'Feminine'? Well, but my goodness!—what would you expect?"

"It makes you, to most men, my dear, so irresistible! I can't understand how you've gone this long without being married. Why haven't you married, Meely?"

"Ach, I ain't got no curiosity!"

He winced. How blatantly vulgar she could be!

However, she had given him his cue—a wedge to break down barriers.

He found himself surprised at his own sense of reluctance to come to the point with her, to put his quest to the test; an undefined apprehension of disappointment—though of course that was ridiculous — surely she "loved" and desired him, or why had she been risking so much to meet him here? Surely she was flattered at his desiring her!

He suddenly snatched her to him with passionate kisses—so fiercely that this time she was too helpless in his hard grip to avert his lips—and into her ears he poured out words not in her vocabulary—she could only guess their meaning; could only surmise that now at last he was telling her what all along she had known—that he took her for a "hussy!"—and although through all these weeks she had been expecting this climax, yet it came to her now with a shuddering shock.

In vain she struggled to free herself from his arms and his appalling words.

"Let me go—or I'll scream!" she managed to gasp at last.

He was not too far gone to know the danger of her threat—their hilltop, though isolated, being not too distant for a scream to be heard from the valley below.

Panting, baffled, he dropped his arms from about her, his face distorted with a mingled resentment and an anguish of hungry yearning. But he clutched her skirt lest she get up and run away. She only moved, however, a few inches from him on the log, her whole body trembling, her face deathly white.

"If you touch me, I'll scream!" she gasped.

He could not find breath to answer her.

"Can we," she asked scarcely above a whisper, "talk this here thing out, Mr. Creighton?"

"What's there to say? I want you! You surely want me!—I'll amply reward you—"

"You mean—buy me?"

"Of course not—any more than you'll buy me. We want each other, Meely! I'll reward you for the risk you take—reward you well—"

"Do you mean you'll give me—money?"

"A pile of it—that you can put away for your marriage—"

Meely started—this was an amazing world that was being revealed to her! She had not dreamed how far some men would go, how ruthless they could be, in degrading a girl.

"For my marriage!" she breathed. "Ach, Mr. Creighton, I didn't know you thought that low-down of me!"

Before the look of utter dismay that had come into her face, he actually felt, to his own bewilderment, a momentary embarrassment. Was she going to be sentimental and scrupulous? That would make things much too difficult—he had certainly not anticipated having to wrestle with scruples!

"I don't think 'low-down' of you, Meely. We love each other—"

"Love? But I'd think, Mr. Creighton, that if a man loved a girl he'd purtect her, not hurt her!"

"But love never hurt anyone, Meely! It enriches and blesses—because it gives ecstasy! Ecstasy, Meely!"

"Supposin' you had a sister—would you go ahead and tell her to take such blessing and riches and ecstasy as you're offerin' me? Would you?"

He ignored this ridiculous question. "Meely, love should be as free and natural to us as breathing this autumn air! It's a glorious adventure—"

"But if it's that—'a glorious adventure'—why make it a sneakin', ugly bargain that you gotta hide and be ashamed of all your life?"

"Ashamed? Look at those birds—and all the other wild, free things! Are they ashamed? Then why should we be ashamed when we're only yielding to our natures that God gave us—"

He found himself reasoning with her just as though he believed she were seriously putting up all these objections!

"Yes, well, but the birds mate," she answered, "and live in a nest and hatch young ones. That's what love is—a home and children, living and working together and bringing up children. Nothing else is good enough for me, Mr. Creighton, thank you!"

"Oh, Meely, you don't realize!—a free, spontaneous love like ours can be so much more beautiful than the deadly dull, stale marriage relation!"

"'Beautiful'! Sneakin' and hidin' for fear we'll be found out!—and goin' against the Nature you talk about!—for it's goin' against Nature when you darsen't have a child. And you call that love! That ain't love, Mr. Creighton. It's—well, what would you call it? I don't know what you'd call it!"

"If all you see in love (a lovely young creature like you!) is child bearing!"

"But that's what love's for, ain't it?—if it's Nature you're plaguin' me to follow. And you offerin' me money yet for my marriage! As if even a common man would marry me if he knowed I was a loose woman! Even a workin' man, Mr. Creighton, wants his kids' mother to be a good woman!"

"But there's no 'right' or 'wrong' in love, Meely—love is so divinely above those superstitions! Love is—"

"I ain't thinkin'," she broke in, "so much about whether it's right or wrong. It's whether it's good sense for a girl to give herself to a man that thinks she ain't good enough to marry him! What's it worth to a girl?"

Health for Females in Open-Air Exercise

There seems to be no reason why a woman or girl should not get as much enjoyment out of life as any man or boy. Too many of our sex consider themselves hothouse flowers. If the weather is cold or stormy they will not venture outdoors. The sun must be shining and the weather warm before they will spend any time outside. Whether it is cold or warm, calm or stormy, every woman and girl should spend at least three hours daily in the open air. Not merely resting, but walking, washing or playing some game. Being in the fresh air is all right in a way, but to get 100 per cent value out of the good air, one should exercise in it. Even if the exercise consists only of deep breathing, this, at least, exercises the lungs. I find that too many women neglect their breathing. They very seldom take a deep breath. It is easy to get into the habit of taking the deep breathing; expanding the lungs to the limit if only two or three time a day. Doing this indoors is of little value. The fresh air should be taken advantage of. By this means, alone, one can obtain assurance against lung troubles. And there is no cost whatever for this treatment.—Psychology Magazine.

Help Kidneys By Drinking More Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Help Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation.

More Cars Than Phones

Statistics compiled by the Chrysler statistical division show that there are more motor cars than telephones in use today. The automobile industry now surpasses the steel business, the clothing and the telephone industry in size. It has become the world's most important commercial activity except providing food, clothing and shelter for humanity.

Cats Rigidly Barred From Birds' Sanctuary

There is a happy hunting ground for cats in Massachusetts which is closed to them. It is Muskeget island, off Nantucket. The place is one of the very few breeding places for gulls and terns, among the greatest sea scavengers known to man. Up to 30 years ago, when Muskeget was set apart as a sanctuary for them, house cats from the life-saving station and whatever fishermen maintained in transient abodes in shacks during the fishing season became wild and conducted an almost successful war of extermination of the birds.

The cats mated and raised large families, and their numbers became manifold. They grew to be wild and ferocious and killed gulls and terns by thousands until it seemed as though the birds would be exterminated. Now the law has come to the rescue of the sea scavengers and not a cat is permitted to range the island or to be kept on the premises even of the life-saving station. The penalty is a fine of from $50 to $100, and prosecution by the state is vigorous.

"'Of course,' she said, "it's no virtue to be virtuous if you're ugly.'

"The spinster looked very angry, but before she could think of anything to say, Ruth went on:

"'A pretty girl's face may be her misfortune sometimes. An ugly one's is always her chaperon.'"

The Trouble

Doctor Williams ended with the words:

"To conclude, then, gentlemen, we perceive that every married man alive knows how to govern his wife, but the trouble is she won't let him."

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

The one hundred and nineteenth anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birthday on February 12 recalls afresh the greatness of our first martyred president, whose memory is revered by North and South alike.

While it is futile to speculate concerning what might have been, it is safe to say that had Lincoln been permitted to live until the end of his second term, much of the bitterness engendered during the reconstruction days would have been avoided. His attitude throughout the Civil war was summed up in one single phrase of his second inaugural address: "With malice toward none; with charity for all."

Lincoln was opposed to slavery on principle, but his plan was to abolish it gradually, and compensate slave-owners as slaves were set free. He proposed such a plan as early as 1849 when a Congressman, and renewed the proposal as president in 1862, after the war had been in progress nearly a year. Congress passed a resolution offering the plan, but without result except in the District of Columbia.

Throughout the war, Lincoln's chief aim was to preserve the Union intact, the slavery question being secondary in his mind, as was evidenced by his famous reply to Greeley wherein he said:

"My paramount object is to save the Union, and not either to save or destroy slavery. If I could save the Union without freeing any slave, I would do it; if I could save it by freeing all the slaves, I would do it; and, if I could do it by freeing some and leaving others alone, I would also do that."

Now, after more than sixty-five years, there is no one in any part of the United States who will not concede that a united nation without slavery is best. It is well for America and for the world that on February 12, 1809, such a man as Abraham Lincoln was born.

CANADIAN AIR MAIL

Replacing the faithful dog teams which have heretofore mushed across the dreary trails to carry mail to the prospectors of the Red Lake gold areas of Canada, an air mail service from Winnipeg has been established.

According to the announcement recently made, four post offices, Red Lake, Gold Pines, Narrow Lake and Jackson Manion, will be served by airplanes of the Western Canadian Airways on a weekly schedule, which was inaugurated on January 25.

It is believed that the introduction of this modern means of transportation between Winnipeg and those outlying settlements will give great impetus to the development of the gold fields and prove of much benefit to the various mining companies operating in that region, which is said to possess enormous potential wealth.

Thus remote sections of the earth, hitherto almost inaccessible, are being brought into touch with civilization by the conquering airplane.

HOOVER ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY

Herbert Clark Hoover, of California, has announced his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination, having given formal permission for his Ohio supporters to enter his name in the Ohio primary.

In his announcement of his candidacy, Mr. Hoover indicated his intention to refrain from personal campaigning in the pre-convention primaries and to retain his official post at the head of the Commerce Department.

Mr Hoover declared: "My conviction that I should not strive for nomination, and my obligations as Secretary of Commerce, preclude me from making any personal campaign. I must rely wholly upon my friends in Ohio to conduct it, and to conduct it in a fair manner and with steadfast regard for Republican success in the state and the nation. It is my special desire that expenditures of money shall be strictly limited and rigidly accounted for."

Mr. Hoover declared himself "bound to forward the principles of the Republican party and the great objectives of President Coolidge's policies."

Secretary Hoover's announcement is regarded by his friends as sanctioning also the setting up of tentative organizations in other states. Since President's Coolidge's declaration last August that he did not choose to run, Secretary Hoover's entrance into the race has been confidently predicted in political circles.

A BOLSHEVIST GESTURE

Since the World war a number of prominent figures have been tried and sentenced to death by tribunals in other countries which had no means of reaching the objects of their condemnation for execution of the death penalty. We believe a court somewhere in the United States sentenced the former Kaiser to death a few years ago, and several such sentences were pronounced in Europe.

Following these precedents, no less a personage than the Pope of Rome was recently notified that he had been condemned to death. This unusual if not important information was conveyed to Pope Pius XI in an official communication received by him from the Russian Soviet government, which bore the signatures of Premier Rykov and Secretary Stalin.

The document was delivered to the Supreme Pontiff by registered mail, and stated that the sentence had been pronounced because of his opposition to the Bolshevist movement. After showing the paper to several of his Cardinals, the Pope ordered that it be filed in the archives of the Vatican as an historical relic. Which ends the incident, so far as he is concerned.

Possibly Rykov and Stalin derived some satisfaction from this condemnatory gesture, but that is all it amounts to.

WAR ON RATS

It is conservatively estimated that every rat in the country costs $2 a year in food consumed and other damage done on farms and elsewhere. Realization of this fact has led to widespread efforts to exterminate these pests through organized community efforts.

Through the use of Calcium cyanide gas the citizens of Clinton county, Ohio, destroyed about 50,000 rats last November. Recently the vocational agricultural class at Milford, Illinois, made rat killing a game, choosing up sides in a contest to see which side could accumulate the largest number of rat tails.

In many other communities, farmers, boys' and girls' clubs and citizens generally have waged war on the destructive rodents with excellent results.

The rat is one of the greatest enemies of mankind, being a carrier of disease as well as destroyer of property. Every possible means should be systematically employed for the extermination of the pest.

TO REDUCE ILLITERACY

Federal assistance in the reduction of illiteracy in the nation is proposed in a bill introduced in Congress by Representative Victor L. Berger, of Wisconsin. The measure, he explained, would provide for an annual appropriation of $2,000,000 for six years, to be apportioned among the states having the greatest percentage of illiteracy, with the understanding that the states would match the amount of the federal advance. He described it as unfortunate that the United States, which was one of the first nations to make opportunities for an elementary school education generally available, should now be trailing other nations in the illiteracy scale. It might be added that the creation of a Department of Education, as proposed in the Curtis-Reed bill, would go a long way toward erasing this blot from our national reputation.

DID YOU SAY CHARACTER?

Probably no word in our language needs more to be given thought, made prominent, and emphasized in the press than character. From the selection of president to a traffic officer at a street crossing, the process of selection must never overlook character. Character in the saleswoman in a mercantile establishment serves the business and the purchaser by having just that little quality—character is her most valuable asset on which to base wages. Character in a bank or any big business enterprise is a synonym for millions of credit. Character in a president means stability for the nation.

Some of the politicians appear to still believe that although Mr. Coolidge does not choose to run for another term he might be induced to stand for it.

A San Francisco pastor declares that "silence is sometimes sin." Not a very prevalent one, however.

PAYS AN OFFICIAL VISIT TO EL CARMELO PARLOR

On Wednesday evening, Mae Himes Noonan, Grand President of the Native Daughters of the Golden West, paid her official visit to El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, in Masonic Hall, Daly City. Many grand officers and visiting members were present on this occasion.

The following officers, headed by President Alice Mathias, presented the ritualistic work: Matilda Heeringa, Sylvia Fischer, Lorraine Wall, Dolores Barron, Florence McKendrick, Emma Schwartz, Freida Schade and Sarah Bataini, Ida Doyle, Collista Dalton, Hattie Kelley, Margaret McDonald, Mary May, Fredericka Volkman, Annie Biggio, Elsie Forsell and Madeline Fellows.

Grand President Noonan addressed the assembled members and complimented El Carmelo Parlor. She was presented with a beautiful gift of silver. After the business of the evening all enjoyed a delicious spread in the banquet hall, which was prepared by Mrs. May and Mrs. Volkman, assisted by several members under the direction of First Vice-President Lorraine Wall, who was chairman of the committee in charge.

TRAFFIC OFFICERS ORDERED 234,738 MOTORISTS TO CURB

Traffic officers, working under the direction of the state division of motor vehicles, ordered 234,738 motorists to pull to the curb in California during the last year and explain why they were going so fast, driving with faulty lights, taking too much of the road, cutting-in, or otherwise violating the motor vehicle act.

Of this number the excuses offered by 67,013 were not good enough to satisfy the officers and they were taken into custody to tell their respective stories to the judge.

The records, just made public by division officials, show 13,373 paid fines for a total amount of $468,748. This indicates an average fine, on all charges, of $35.05 a violator.

The division maintained an average force during the year of 247 men, the largest forces being in San Diego and Orange counties. Seventeen men are employed in each of these counties.

Headlight raids during the year netted a total of 104,933 persons who were technically arrested and ordered to have their lights adjusted.

A high light of the work of the officers was the collection of delinquent fees from motorists amounting to $144,773.90.

In patrolling their beats for the year the officers rode a total of 4,596,070 miles.

THE RAIL SPLITTER

One of the titles by which Abraham Lincoln is affectionately known is the "Rail Splitter." In this, as in many other things, he was a symbol of the times in which he lived. Then the great need was to clear the land of the encumbering forest, in order that homes might be built and farms developed. Up and down the land could be heard the ringing of axes of rail splitter and logger, cutting into the heart of the finest forests that ever grew.

America has long outgrown the rail-splitting age. Broadly speaking, no longer must our timber lands be cleared to make room for more farms. While it is true that some lands in the West, now in forests, will in time be cleared for agriculture, there are 81 million acres of land in the United States which are growing neither farm crops nor tree crops. They are for most part denuded lands, which should be producing something useful.

Today, far-seeing statesmen, economists and business men are beginning to recognize that the forest is a crop. They know that if we would preserve American civilization, we must grow as much timber as we cut. We must have forests as well as farms. An appropriate thought for Lincoln's birthday is that if he were alive today, he would be our most ardent leader in forest conservation.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

The question whether branches of the University of California should be established in such cities as Sacramento, Fresno and San Diego is among those to be considered in an educational survey to be started by the State in April. The advisability of four-year colleges in the cities mentioned has been under discussion.

An automobile standard for formal State functions, similar in design to that of the President of the United States, was presented by the officers of the California National Guard. The standard, turned over to the Governor by Adjutant General R. E. Mittelstaedt, carries the California seal in colors on a blue background, and four silver stars signifying the commander-in-chief of the State military.

The prediction that California's gasoline tax revenues will reach $32,000,000 in 1928, as compared to $24,443,137, is made at Sacramento by the State Board of Equalization following the announcement that the tax for the last quarter of 1927 totaled $7,566,919. Dixwell L. Pierce, secretary of the board, explained that the last three months of 1927 constituted the first full quarter the 3-cent per gallon tax was levied.

"Young California" to the total number of 218,499 was in attendance in California's high schools, junior high school and junior colleges on October 1, 1927, with the opening of the present school term. Later figures announced by Walter E. Morgan, chief of the Bureau of Statistics of the State Department of Education, a few days ago show that students in regular high schools numbered 119,038, in junior high schools 91,288, and in junior colleges 8173. There were 398 high schools in operation in California on that date. One hundred and twenty-eight junior high schools were being maintained, and twenty junior colleges.

To meet conditions of increased congestion and higher legal speed limits on California highways, the California State Automobile Association is launching on a program of reconstruction of its yellow-diamond road-sign system, according to announcement last week by James W. Johnson, association chief engineer. "These new and improved types of signs," said Johnson, "will provide not only better protection to motorists, but will serve to guide motorists along their routes even more quickly and easily than does the existing sign system, which is considered a model for the Nation.

The American Automobile Association is urging its 958 affiliated clubs to adopt the public school traffic reserve system as developed in this State by the California State Automobile Association in co-operaton with school and police authorities. In assisting member clubs to organize and train juvenile traffic officer squads, the nation-wide motorists' organization has issued a pamphlet of instruction based on the operation of school reserve units as organized by State Automobile Associations in twenty-nine cities in Northern and Central California. Many Three A clubs have adopted the plan.

Bert B. Meek, state director of public works, announced last week that orders involving the expenditure of $994,237.04 for highway construction and maintenance work have been ratified in order to carry out the state administration's policy of providing as much work as possible for the unemployed during the slack season. General allocation of the funds give the forty-five northern counties $190,586.37 for improvement and maintenance work and $64,500 in supplemental allotments, and the thirteen southern counties $228,750.67 for improvement work. In addition, $74,000 is set aside for surveys and preparation of plans, $241,000 to cover engineering expenses and inspection and $100,000 for purchase of right of way.

Appointment of Professor Charles B. Wing of Stanford University as chief of the State division of parks was announced last week by Fred G. Stevenot, director of the State department of natural resources. Wing will become permanent head of parks of the division of parks, on nomination of the State park commission, succeeding W. B. Rider, who has been temporary chief of the division since its organization under new legislation. The salary is $5,000 a year. The division of parks, operating under the department of natural resources and the park commission, has jurisdiction over existing State parks and the duty of building up a proposed comprehensive State park system. To finance this undertaking a $6,000,000 bond issue will appear on the November election ballot.

One hundred of Mexico's most prominent educators will come to California next month for a thirty-day visit. This was announced in Berkeley last week following a meeting of the Faculty Club of the University of California. Their visit comes as a result of arrangements made by Dr. C. N. Thomas of San Jose, general director of the International Council for Educational Progress, who recently returned from Mexico, where he held conferences with President Calles, Ambassador Morrow and others. The Mexican visitors will spend two weeks in Northern California.

TUNNEY NOT BORN PRIZE FIGHTER

Has Dignity Without Being High-Hattish.

[By IRVIN S. COBB.]

I met Tunney summer before last in California. For more than a month we bedded in adjacent billets at the Hollywood Athletic club. I saw him almost daily and I had abundant opportunities to appraise him from various angles. Having won the right to challenge the champion, he was making ready for the meeting which took place that September in Philadelphia. He had not entered upon active training, but between stunts of play-acting before a camera at a moving-picture plant he was conditioning himself.

I came to know him fairly well, and from the beginning I liked him. By my gauge he was altogether likable.

Physically he was the perfect athlete. His muscular movements were graceful and rhythmic; his stripped supple body, with its pinky-white smooth skin, was a thing for a painter to paint. In no way—by his manners, his speech, his unmarred and almost classically handsome face, or by his behavior—did he suggest the conception which has been built up in men's minds as the conception of the typical pug.

I didn't believe he was what we call the born prize fighter; he lacked in his composition the element of tigerish cruelty which a born fighter needs must have. He had dignity without being in the least high-hattish. He had modesty, but he didn't got to and fro advertising his modesty. I never cared for the specimen who is forever bragging about how modest he is. Tunney had confidence in himself, but not too much confidence—just enough, I should say, for an up-and-coming contender in a dangerous and difficult line of business.

He was no poser, or my estimate of him is altogether wrong. He might be violating and defying all accepted rules for the common conduct of a paid bruiser by desiring to learn something as he went along, and he might continue, as he has, to affront the tender sensibilities of the run of fight fanciers by reading books and magazines and by going to recitals and lectures and good plays; but on no occasion did I detect him in the act of pretending a greater acquaintance with any subject, literary or otherwise, than he had.

He told me he was of undiluted Celtic stock, but he looked more like a Scandinavian than like an Irish boy. Well, there was much Danish blood in the ancient Irish breed. Offhand he suggested a well-born, well-bred college football player of Swedish or Norwegian descent. Seeing him strolling across a campus and not knowing who and what he was, you would have said he matched in with the surroundings. You would never have fancied him as being at home in a prize ring.

For a matter of fact, I don't believe he is at home in a prize ring and I look to see him taking himself permanently out of it so soon as he has made enough money at his present trade to satisfy his present desires, and before there is peril of damage to his reputation as an honest fighter by certain dubious and corrupting influences which, according to common rumor, have very definitely undermined the structures of the fight business.

Mind you, I'm not trying to make a hero or a demigod or even a young viking out of a professional scrapper. Merely I am trying to paint a likeness with my own crayons.—Cosmopolitan.

Hurler Ring's Disposal Recalls Bright Career

Disposal of Jimmy Ring to the Phillies by the St. Louis Cardinals recalls the high spot in Jimmy's pitching career—his work in the lamented world's series of 1919.

Ring stood the Black-and-White Sox on their respective heads in that series, and was the outstanding star of the series for the earnest and honest Reds.

Ring saw several years of real service after that, and as a matter of fact, Sam Breadon, Cardinal owner, counted on some valuable aid from Jim's good arm when the latter was obtained from the Giants a year ago with Frankie Frisch in the trade that sent Rogers Hornsby to the Giants. Ring, however, failed to deliver.

LITTLE CHICKS

A great many people had been to the poultry show that day and that night.

See the Broken Shells.

They had admired the beautiful roosters, the hens, the geese, and the turkeys, but most of all they liked the little chicks breaking through their shells.

At last every one left the poultry show except the ones who were watching over the animals.

The barnyard creatures were a little homesick, but still they did like cackling and crowing and talking over affairs of the barnyard with each other.

The little chicks were still halfway out of their shells and halfway in their shells.

They thought it seemed quite strange outside in the well-lighted building, though now it was really not lighted very much.

Most of the lights had been turned out, but to the tiny chicks it was very, very light.

"See the broken shells we are leaving behind us," said the little chick to his brother.

"Will we ever be able to get back in again?"

"I don't believe we will," said another little chick.

"Oh dear, there we have gone and broken our shells and we won't be able to get back.

"And we may want to, very much indeed. We may feel very shy in the great barnyard world where we are going.

"And we may want to crawl back into our little dark hiding places."

"We shouldn't have been in such a rush to get out. Oh dear, oh dear, and I was hurrying so much," said another tiny chick.

"Little chickens," said a voice, and the little chicks peeped softly, "what is it?" They were not in the least frightened, for the voice was so soft and sweet.

"Little chicks," said the voice again, "I am the Fairy Queen.

"I won't come too near you so as to frighten you, but I am going to tell you a story."

"Do tell us a story, sweet-voiced creature," said the little chicks.

So the Fairy Queen began:

"I heard you talking," she said, "and your little voices sounded sad and sorrowful because you couldn't get back into your shells as you had broken them so hurriedly in trying to get out.

"Now, chicks, you mustn't feel badly about that. Every one and every creature almost does the same thing.

"Little boys and girls do it—we all do it.

"Little boys and girls don't actually break out of their shells but when they grow they naturally get bigger.

"That is what you are doing.

"You are growing out of your shells just as boys and girls grow out of their shoes and their suits and their dresses.

"They can't get back into them again, either, any more than you can get back into your shells, for that is growth, little chicks, and when you grow to get bigger and stronger you can't go back to your babyhood.

Tell Us a Story

"A grown-up man can't go back into a little boy, a little boy can't go back the way he was when he was a baby and had to be wheeled in a carriage, and neither can you go back into your shells.

"None of us can do such things, because it isn't Mother Nature's way, and Mother Nature's way is always the best.

"So don't feel sad, little chicks, because you are leaving your shells for good.

"It only means you are growing up into big chickens."

And they all felt happy again.

Fought the Sandman

Little Gordon was taken from a sound sleep and made ready for a journey during the holidays, while his mother murmured what a pity it was to disturb his slumbers.

When he was finally maneuvered into his coat and cap and stood upon his feet, he said, sleepily: "I fighted the sandman, muvver, didn't I?"

Self-Control

My dolly would not play with me.
She simply stared
Her silly stare
It made me wild
To pull her hair.
I kissed her very quietly
And walked outdoors and kicked a tree.

Cheerfulness means a contented spirit; a pure heart, a kind and loving disposition; it means humility and charity, a generous appreciation of others and a modest opinion of self.—Thackeray.

TEA-WAGON SUPPERS

Informality seems to be the keynote of all entertaining these days, and what a comfort it is to feel that we need not outdo Mrs. C—just open our homes and our hearts to our friends and give them a royal welcome. A cup of tea with a small cake, and a cheery greeting that warms the heart of even the stranger will make a feast.

We all love to use and enjoy our beautiful linens on occasions, but they are often a weariness to the flesh when we have to launder them ourselves. Now with the comfortable large-sized paper napkin, and paper doilies so dainty in design, one may revel in them without thinking of the laundry tubs.

There is no meal so well fitted for informality as the supper around the grate fire on a Sunday night or after an evening out skating, skiing or at the theater.

With the food placed on the tea-wagon with the serving dish on the bottom, it will be little work to serve a small party. If one wishes to use a chafing dish, that always adds to the pleasure, as one likes to see a dish being prepared.

With a toaster and good coals in the grate the toast may be prepared by one and the rarebit by another. Give every one something to do; this helps break the stiffness and adds to the enjoyment of all. Finally let the male members help remove the meal and if you choose, wash the dishes. They will like it.

One may serve scalloped oysters with sandwiches, pickles or a salad. The hot dish of course would be prepared in the kitchen and baked in the range. Creamed oysters served on toast may be done in the chafing dish.

A hot cheese sandwich, with hot milk or cocoa, or a cup of tea, a bit of cake and fruit, will make a most satisfying supper.

Chicken a la king is another good supper dish to serve in this way. There will be many others which will occur to the hostess and provide variety.

A small table covered with pretty linen and holding the silver and pretty plates always adds to such an occasion.

Approved Recipes.

A good vegetable soup is a dish enjoyed by everybody. Try this one:

Vegetable Cream Soup.—Chop together one potato, one onion, one carrot, add one quart of boiling water and a can of peas, cook for an hour, replenishing the water when necessary, then strain, add two tablespoonfuls each, of butter and flour cooked together, salt, pepper, a grating of nutmeg, a can of vegetable soup, one-half cupful of hot water and just before serving add one-half cupful of cream or evaporated milk.

Grape Fruit and Apricot Salad.—Cut three grapefruit into halves, remove the pulp, add sugar to sweeten and let stand to chill for two hours. Arrange on lettuce leaves, piling on a few spoonfuls of grapefruit then mayonnaise and top with an apricot.

Rack of Lamb.—Order a three pound rack of lamb cracked, with a small piece taken from the top; this may be used for soup. Remove any surplus fat and wipe the meat with a damp cloth. Put a tablespoonful of butter in a roasting pan and when very hot add the lamb. Brown well and dust with salt and pepper, then add the following chopped vegetables: One onion, two green peppers, two cupfuls of celery, two carrots; cook fifteen minutes, then add one cupful of boiling water, pouring it around the meat. Roast for an hour, basting occasionally. Serve with the meat in the center of a platter with buttered peas and small potatoes, also buttered, as a garnish. Make a sauce from the gravy in the pan, and serve with meat.

Stuffed Cheese Potatoes.—Bake six large even-sized potatoes after rubbing them over with a little bacon fat. When thoroughly done cut into halves lengthwise, scoop out the potato and wash well, then add one teaspoonful of butter, one-third of a cupful of milk, salt and pepper to season; fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites of two eggs. Fill the shells and place a thin slice of cheese on top of each. Return to the oven to brown and melt the cheese. Serve at once.

Sliced Tomatoes With Spanish Dressing.—Mix together three-fourths cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful of paprika, one-fourth teaspoonful of white pepper; add one teaspoonful of vinegar and one-half cupful of olive oil with the juice of a lemon, strained. Beat thoroughly, chill, then beat again. Serve on fruit or tomato salad.

Small Girl Quick to See Point in Favor

Mavourneen, age four, had never been entirely convinced on the household rule that she should comb her hair, regardless of the hurry in dressing to "go somewhere." The youngster frequently protested to her mother, against what, to the youthful mind, was a needless waste of time.

The other evening the family car was passing Pump Company No. 8 in Massachusetts avenue, just as an alarm came in. The sudden stop of traffic; the quick scramble among the firemen to board the truck, as it raced out the doors, left the youngster speechless, but she soon came back to normalcy by exclaiming: "Now, you see, mother, they didn't stop to comb their hair."—Indianapolis News.

Labor-Saving Machines

Through the marvels of modern machinery only 67 men are now required on the average, to do what was the work of 100 only 25 years ago according to the National Industrial Conference board. At this rate 45 men will be doing the same work in 1950.

But machines have not thrown men out of work because as production has increased, so has the demand for additional commodities.

STAGE LINES ORDERED TO CUT DOWN SPEED

As an aftermath to the numerous serious accidents in which auto stages have been involved, the Railroad Commisison has issued a drastic measure to force the passenger stage companies to adjust their time schedules so that it will not be necessary for the stages to travel faster than the maximum speed limit.

Every stage company has been ordered by the commisison to file these new schedules on or before March 15. With due allowance made for stops and traffic conditions, the stages must not exceed the speed limit between any given points.

This order follows closely upon the heels of an investigation made recently by the San Mateo county board of supervisors, in conjunction with members of the state motor vehicle department.

GET OUT AND STAY OUT

In a long and forceful article in a recent issue of the Tri-City Times, of Winter Haven, Florida, Publisher James A. Metcalf urges that the government should get out of the field of operations of printers and stay out. "The principal beneficiaries of the printed stamped envelope monopoly," says Mr. Metcalf, "are the big catalogue houses, which use stamped envelopes by the hundreds of thousands. But the United States is under no obligation to them, nor to the smaller users of stamped envelopes, to save them money."

In a letter addressed to Senator Fletcher of Florida, Mr. Metcalf pertinently observes:

"The printers and publishers of the country are basing their opposition to this evil, not solely upon the basis of their material interests (which, however, are entitled to full consideration) but equally upon the principles involved. We agree most heartily with the statement of Mr. Lewis E. Pierson, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States: 'It is important to preserve American business, but it is far more important to preserve American government. If government finds it can enter business without resistance, how long before it extends its operations to all business? And when the government has wormed its way into the whole spread of American trade, the heart will be gone from American business, and American government, as our forefathers built it, will have vanished from the earth.'"

A good many juries really need fixing, but not in the way it is usually attempted.

Miss Louise Lockenbill, aged 26, declined the presidency of a large New York advertising company because she feared prejudice against a woman in such a position would lose business for the firm.

Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, eight times American woman tennis champion, won her first match upon returning to the game after being out for some time.

REWARDS FOR FIRE SAFETY

Bend, Oregon, for years nationally famous for its low fire loss, is to receive a new insurance reduction baser on the purchase of another modern pumper fire engine.

Insurance rates are based on actual risks, as shown by actuarial reports. Where the people are careful, where the fire departments are capably equipped and operated, where the building regulations are such as to reduce the fire hazards, insurance rates drop. They drop far more as a rule than the equipment and department costs rise. No town ever made more profitable investments than good fire-fighting equipment.

The net result of reductions in fire losses permits carrying increased amounts of insurance while decreasing its cost. Criminal prosecution for careless or wanton fires will check the present reign of red terror.

SIDELIGHTS

Among the many inquiries being made by the Federal Trade Commission is an investigation of trade practices of mop manufacturers, who have been called upon to explain how they conduct their business. Won't it be grand when we can be assured that there is no mop trust?

Otis L. Wiese has been made editor-in-chief of McColl's Magazine at the age of 22, but will not accept the increased salary due to his promotion from assistant editor until he has demonstrated that he can make good. Which is a fair indication that he will make good.

Big league baseball teams are said to be paying $100,000 and more for single players purchased from other teams, in addition to salaries. And it was not so many years ago that "Rube" Marquard was the sensation of the game and dubbed "the $11,000 beauty," when sold for that amount.

More than 500 Masons were assembled recently at Wheaton, Ill., to witness the conferring of the Master Mason degree on "Red" Grange, famed football star. It is said that "Red' didn't try any forward passes or line bucks on the Masonic "goat."

Among those bits of more or less useless information which we find interesting for the moment is one to the effect that Americans spent $300,000 for Santa Claus whiskers last December. Quite a sum to blow in for something even the kids don't believe in any more.

Do bears ever "play 'possum?" That is what is perplexing Harry Hanson, of Lee, Maine. He shot a bear in his orchard and the animal keeled over, apparently dead, but when Hanson approached later to cut his throat, Bruin suddenly leaped to his feet, knocked Hanson down and bear-handled him generally. Then the bear trotted off into a thicket, while Hanson hurried to a doctor.

Golfers who are ambitious to make a "hole in one" are offered an unusual opportunity by the course at Hilo, Hawaii, according to the Tribune-Herald of that city, which claims the largest "hole in one" club in the world. And no wonder. The "hole" is none other than the big crater of the famed Kilauea volcano.

The worst play on record is reported from an Eastern city, where it is declared that the disgusted audience began leaving soon after the first act had gotten under way. A little later they were pouring out of the theatre in droves, causing some wag to shout: "Women and children first."

Eugenio Bergatto chose unwisely when he tried to ply his vocation as a pickpocket on a Paris street and selected Charles Wolenberg, a superintendent of police of an American city, for his victim. Wolenburg felt Bergatto's hand slip into his pocket, grappled it and hustled the culprit to jail.

William Eckerle, county recorder at Huntington, Indiana, has just performed an official duty which someone should have attended to 118 years ago. A land patent signed by Thomas Jefferson as president on February 16, 1809, and issued to Toussaint Dubois, for whom the county was named, was recorded by Eckerle a few days ago.

Strange friendships sometimes arise through a common peril. Two hounds and a fox which they were chasing all fell into a well at Breckenridge, Mo., and remained there three days before being fished out, after which the dogs seemed chummy with the fox and refused to bother him further.

The time-honored joke about the squirting grapefruit may have to go into the discard if a Texas report is to be believed. It states that a new variety has been developed which is sweet, seedless and squirtless.

"So our engagement is at an end?" said the man.

"It is," replied the girl.

"I suppose you will return the engagement ring?"

"Certainly, if you wish. Call around some evening and pick it out."

If you are mechanically inclined, you can make your garage a work shop where you can attend to all the little jobs that have to be done more or less regularly and that are decidedly costly when you pay others to handle them.

He came back from his vacation brown and proud of his bulging muscles. "Look at these arms," he said. They were certainly in good condition. His friends attributed it to rowing, but he withered them with scorn. "Rowing be darned," he snorted. "I got them pulling in fish."

As your lumber dealers we are in the best position to help you remove the obstacles that have prevented you in the past from building. Step in and get acquainted with us.

"What kind of coal, honey?"

"Egg coal."

"How many dozen?"

"Did you see the Seine in Paris?"

"Yes, and a lot that weren't."
